125 Officers shot and killed in the past two years: Record Levels
Officers being indicted at unprecedented rates
Proficient Professional Engagement: Learn How to do It
Balance: Avoiding what is Avoidable!

Today's Street Survival® Seminar addresses law enforcement as the multi-faceted profession it has become. Rather than limiting our focus to just surviving deadly threats, we also discuss the need to prepare officers for making sound, legal, and reasonable decisions under stress in order to preserve the lives of citizens as well as their own.

The foundation of this two-day program is understanding and training realistically for stress events. Based on the iconic course that revolutionized law enforcement training four decades ago, today's Street Survival® continues presenting classic training points while also addressing current events issues impacting the profession using lecture and up-to-date videos of police/citizen interactions.

Finally, the seminar emphasizes the need to understand people and communicate effectively as they embrace the role of civilian peace officers. Topics include, but are not limited to:

- Officer Safety: Knowing "The Fatal Four"
- The Science of Force & Stress: The Latest Research
- Roadway Dangers and Responsibilities: Why are Cops Still Dying on Roadways?
- Attack Signals: What to Look For
- When Things Go Sideways: Gaining Verbal, Physical and Psychological Control
- Approach Tactics: People, Vehicles & Buildings
- Tactics for Criminal Patrol: Don't Miss the Signs
- Off-Duty Survival: You and Your Family
